

Nonviolence or Nonexistence:

50 years ago Martin Luther King, Jr. was murdered

Jan Øberg, TFF, Lund, Sweden - April 4, 2018

At a time when it is evident that the West has lost its moral compass, it is worth contemplating the legacy of this towering peace philosopher and practitioner - who was killed 50 years ago today.

It is worth remembering his struggle against capitalism and war - while not diminishing his central role in the civil rights movement.

It is worth teaching our young generations how important nonviolence is, that it is the norm of the United Nations and international law - but, tragically, ignored by virtually all governments around the world. Run by lesser minds than MLK.

Indeed, that the choice in front of us is this:

To reduce direct physical, psychological, media, structural, gender and cultural violence - or further reduce our humanity to the level of likely extinction.

That's why we at the Transnational Foundation continue - together with millions of other media-ignored people around the world - to struggle for this "unrealistic" reduction.

Robert Burrowes here gives you a few examples of that struggle. Both Gandhi and MLK are alive today. But made invisible by the advocates of violence and war.

And we have added a guide* for those who still believe in knowledge in times of rampant propaganda, omission and fake on which all violence thrives:

More war, more fake

<https://transnational.live/2018/04/04/nonviolence-or-nonexistence-the-legacy-of-martin-luther-king-jr/>

"OUR LIVES BEGIN TO END

THE DAY WE BECOME SILENT ABOUT THINGS THAT MATTER"

